HOME DESIGN DOESN'T GET ANY CHICER than at Atlanta's Westside Design District. Nowhere else in town can savvy shoppers find the assortment of shops, restaurants and residential available here. As a result, those "in the know" continue to spread the word about this continuously evolving design destination.

1100-1210 Howell Mill Road, N.W.,

RESIDENTIAL The recently redeveloped White Provision Development includes White Provision Residences (opposite), made up of 94 available homes with 18 different floor plans. Ultra-chic with modern finishes, the residences have features that include Brazilian Ipe floors, KitchenAid appliances, Silestone countertops, European showers with subway tile, marble floors, and Kohler bathroom fixtures. Residents not only have the advantage of on-site management; they also have access to a doorman, a guest suite, a fitness center, oversize storage units, manicured gardens and an elevated pool deck with a grilling area. Plus—just a foot bridge away—there are award-winning restaurants and high-end boutiques.

RETAIL The Westside has been a mecca for home and design boutiques for years, and it has only gotten better with the redevelopment of White Provision. The district now includes some of the best upscale retailers in the city—including Bungalow, Knoll, B Braithwaite, Sid Mashburn, Sprout, Seed Factory and Room & Board—all hand-picked by the developers in order to create a distinct community of retailers with complementary focuses.

RESTAURANTS Chefs Anne Quatrano and Clifford Harrison's highly celebrated Bacchanalia was one of the first restaurants to hit the Westside. But now this burgeoning area is chock full of some of the city's best places to dine—think JCT Kitchen, Abattoir, Quinones Room at Bacchanalia, Figo Pasta, Taqueria del Sol, West Egg Café, Star Provisions and, coming soon, Ormsby's. They're all within walking distance of each other and many deliver to White Provision Residences. They're just one (or several) more things to love about this area.
