

In search of ... schnitzel

By Meridith Ford Goldman
The Atlanta Journal-Constitution

Is it stick-to-your-ribs weather already? To heck with that flimsy salad, let's eat schnitzel. Or chicken Parmesan. Or country fried steak. No matter the geography, world cuisine — and Atlanta — has a lot to offer when it comes to pan-fried cutlets.

Abattoir ★★★★★☆

1170 Howell Mill Road, inside the White Provision complex, Atlanta,
www.starprovisions.com

Abattoir's new fall menu is sporting one of the most savory entrees ever: chicken schnitzel — a huge breast of juicy fried chicken, cutlet-style, served in a big white bowl with shards of fennel and celery, plus bits of sweet pear in a juicy au jus. It's plenty big enough to share, but you might not want to.