Sunday Supper

SOUTH

[editorial]

This fall, the bustling Westside Atlanta community will once again unite a collection of the South's most distinguished culinary icons to host Sunday Supper South at Westside Provisions District, a family style charity dinner that celebrates the simple cooking philosophy and seasonally inspired flavors of the South.

A philanthropic platform for the future of the South's thriving culinary community, Sunday Supper South will feature prominent James Beard Foundation award-winning chefs and other prominent chefs hailing from the New Orleans coast and Florida peninsula to the Lowcountry and the nation's capital.

Hosted by Anne Quatrano and Clifford Harrison, the celebrated chefs behind Atlanta's contemporary culinary destinations Bacchanalia, Quinones at Bacchanalia, Abattoir, Floataway Café, and Star Provisions, Sunday Supper South is a regionally driven rendition of the successful "Sunday Supper" tradition established by Chelsea Market in New York City.

Designed to emphasize community, Sunday Supper South follows the path forged by Chelsea Market with a family style charitable dining experience that symbolizes the Westside's passion for neighborhood building.

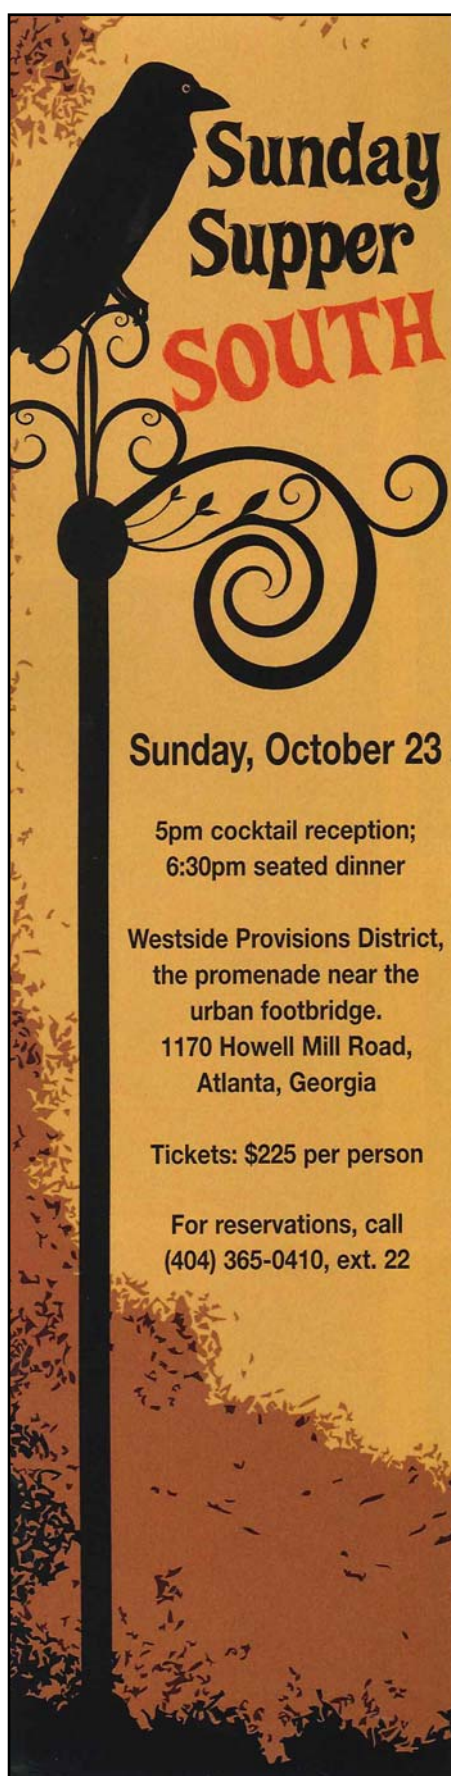

Along the railroad tracks at Westside Provisions District, 150 guests will gather around one long, communal table to enjoy a shared gourmet dinner that represents the South's top culinary talents and artisan producers. It's a can't-miss event and tickets sell out quickly. Info on page 36.
